THE GREAT WATERS of Michigan’s Eastern Upper Peninsula

There is no place on earth quite like the Great Waters of Michigan's Upper Peninsula. A stretch of land two hundred miles across surrounded, protected, and nurtured by the three greatest of the Great Lakes, Huron, Michigan, and Superior.

The Hiawatha National Forest flourishes throughout the region offering countless opportunities in all seasons for biking, hiking, camping, kayaking, snowmobiling, fishing, 4-wheeling, and more.

Discover the many waterfalls and explore the lighthouse sentinels of the Great Waters. Hike the North Country Trail, 4600 miles of footpath-only, quiet adventure that stretches from New York to North Dakota. More than 200 hundred miles of it, managed by local volunteers, meander through the Great Waters region.

From the Anishinabe who first walked these shores to the immigrants who worked the land and the water, to the artists and artisans of today—for those who understand the lasting value of an endless sky, deep forests, and clear blue water, it’s time to discover a place of great wonders, the Great Waters.
